Full Particulars of the Recent Indian Outrages on the Big Horn

MASSACRE AND MUTILATION OF THE BODIES OF [illegible] AND MR SMITH—BOLDNESS OF THEIR ATTACK—[illegible] STRYCHNINED FOR THEIR BENEFIT—[illegible] OF COL KINNEY!

[From the Rocky Mountain (Helena) Gazette]

Last Wednesday Mr Peter O'Conner—who accompanied Captain Standifer's party to the Wind River mountains and has just returned—called upon us and gave us full particulars of the recent outrages of the Sioux Indians on the Big Horn

Upon reaching the head of the Big Horn Captain Standifer's expedition divided—Mr O'Conner and twenty others proceeding up the Big Horn as far as Fort Phil Kearny prospecting everywhere that indications of gold were observed, and that their time was not occupied in fighting hostile Indians, whom they encountered nearly every day Their trip was beset with peril and hardship

At the mouth of Tongue river, the party made a camp Colonel Rice and W Smith went out hunting—the main object in going into camp being to procure fresh meat Night came and passed but they did not return In the morning a detachment was sent in search of the missing men, but their efforts were unavailing Upon their return a more numerous party was despatched The second day out they found three dead horses, which had recently been killed with balls and arrows This led to a closer search, and the discovery of the corpses of Colonel Rice and Mr Smith near by the carcasses of the horses The bodies were mutilated and disfigured horribly Their brutal murderers had not left a hair on the head of either Their bodies had been literally riddled with arrows and bullets Of course all their personal effects however trifling in value, had been carried off by the hell hounds—among which were a valuable gold watch and valuable jewelry belonging to the Colonel The ground around was profusely stained with blood As the Colonel and his companion were well armed this circumstance left no doubt that a desperate fight had taken place hence the painful duty of chronicling the affair is somewhat relieved by the supposition that more than one of the moccasined devils bit the dust before the combat ended with the death of the two brave prospectors Satisfied now that they might at any moment be the victims of indiscriminate slaughter, our friends lost no time, after as decently interring the corpses as circumstances would admit in returning to camp and giving the alarm That night rifle-pits were dug

Early the next morning the camp was abandoned—partly for the purpose of escorting to the hospital at Fort Phil Kearney a member of the company who was dangerously sick with mountain fever and also as a measure of general security They reached the Fort in safety, where they were kindly received by the commander, Colonel Carrington and the sick man was welcomed with the best facilities at the post hospital

At this time the fort itself was in imminent peril All the animals belonging to the cavalry corps had been stolen The savages even had the audacious intrepidity to come within revolver-shot of the stockades in broad daylight, and had picked off and scalped several pickets

After seeing their sick comrade properly cared for, the prospectors went into camp about a mile from the garrison enclosure The wily savages it seems had been following them from the time they left Tongue river every minute watching for a favorable opportunity to descend upon them in murderous fury Just at the break of day the next morning, though their intended victims were nearly within rifle shot of the fort, they deemed that opportunity had arrived, and down they came from their hiding places, a hundred strong, their wild war cries reverberating through the hills and forests as if all the demons of the lower regions had broken loose on the spot Fortunately, when the attack commenced, a party of twenty two soldiers, who were detailed to escort the mail and a supply of ammunition to Fort Smith—a little over one hundred miles distant—were on their way to the prospectors camp, to ascertain how many if any, wished to accompany them The unexpected fire these soldiers opened on the savages confused and turned them Had it not been for this, it is probable not a man would have escaped among the prospectors, as half of them were still soundly slumbering Ten prospectors immediately jumped into their saddles, and started in pursuit. After a chase of a mile and a half, the Indians made a stand, and gave unmistakable evidence of their willingness to hazard a battle The prospectors saw it would be almost certain death to all to close with numbers so overwhelming, and wisely desisting from doing so, returned to their camp All then concluded to join the mail escort for Fort Smith When fourteen or fifteen miles under way, they found several dead mules lying in the road still in their harness, and the ground around strewn with the charred fragments of wagons Further on, newly made graves were seen; while the blood stained earth attested the desperate character of the combat which had recently taken place It was not positively ascertained who these victims were There were two conjectures the one that they were settlers on their way to Fort Phil Kearney for protection, the other that they were a hay party and escort from the fort, which the soldiers knew to be out. The total destruction of property indicates that none were spared in the massacre, while the presence of the graves leads to a different conclusion

Three or four miles further on the ambulance containing the ammunition and mail matter broke down The freight was then divided among the party in equal weights and packed on their riding animals, and the journey was then continued

Eight miles from this they met a party of forty mowers and teamsters and an escort of sixty soldiers—a hundred in all This party reported that they had been driven from the haying ground, with the loss of several of their number They reported that the savages had followed and harassed them every mile of their flight, and that there could be no doubt that they were then prowling around the camp The mowers declared that no money could induce them to return to their work All joined together in digging rifle-pits, and the Indians—knowing, probably, all about this junction of the two parties of whites—did not attack that night

The next morning the mail escort and prospectors parting with their haying friends again proceeded on their journey After traveling an hour or two they came where twenty five or thirty teamsters were in rifle-pits, expecting an attack every minute The teamsters said they had been fighting incessantly for three days, losing one man and having several wounded

Three or four miles further on, our prospecting friends found several head of oxen in the road, pierced with arrows, but still alive Neither Indian or white man was here seen, there were indications however, that a desperate fight had taken place but a short time previously

About seven o'clock in the evening a halt was made, to give their horses an opportunity to feed At sundown they again set out traveling until ten o'clock when a stop was made for the night

Half an hour after they had turned out their stock the savages came pouring in on their camp their screaming and yelling almost drowning the reports of their fire arms the flashes of which were seen in quick succession on every side The first point in the savages strategy was to stampede the stock A storm was impending and the night was one of dense darkness This was a favorable circumstance for the assailed, as it prevented the red demons from shooting with accuracy No damage was done further than a flesh wound in the leg of one of the escort For near an hour the Indians continued their efforts to stampede the stock but they received shot for shot until the major part of the animals had been corralled and a plan of defense settled upon when their fire gradually slackened and finally ceased A cordon of rifle pits was then dug around their horses and in these the night was spent

In the morning scouts were sent out who soon returned reporting that the camp was completely surrounded by the merciless enemy There being no water in the camp and the stock being almost exhausted there was no alternative but to push on About three hundred yards from the camp ground a knoll was reached when to use Mr O'Conner's own expression "a cursed red skin sprang up from behind every rock and bunch of sage" They were mounted on swift and well trained animals and armed cap a pie—many flourishing revolvers of the most approved pattern Sergeant Murphy and the prospectors now held a hurried consultation when it was decided that their only hope of salvation was in cutting their way through their assailants Three charges were accordingly made, the Indians stubbornly maintaining their ground against the first two but the third, they scattered and fled from the field

One of the defending party received a bullet over the right eye but as it glanced off it was not mortal Many Indians were killed but as they carried their dead and disabled from the field as fast as they fell it was impossible to know how many Two fine horses were captured one of which Mr O'Conner now rides

Being now within thirty five miles of Fort Smith the provision was all very carefully strychnined, and together with everything else save the ammunition, was left on the field of battle It is fondly hoped by all who thus devoted their rations, that dead Indians are scattered over those hills as numerously as dead leaves will be a month hence

A detachment of six was then ordered ahead by Sergeant Murphy to have an ambulance sent out from the Fort for the conveyance of the soldier who had been wounded in the forehead, the others following—some being on foot having lost their horses in the fight—as fast as they possibly could

Having arrived at the Fort the Commander Col Kinney, positively refused the ambulance as well as escort to return with the detachment, saying he would send forth no more men to be massacred The main force finally reached the Fort, the savages not renewing the attack

They found Fort Smith as much imperiled as was Fort Phil Kearney The day before their arrival, two soldiers were killed and scalped, in broad daylight, not over four hundred yards from the Fort. Several others had before been as boldly murdered Our informant tells us that Col Kinney allowed the corpses to lie for hours in plain view of the Fort, without making an effort to have them brought inside the stockades, though it is said he did, on several occasions "screw his courage up to the sticking point" of squinting at them through an opera glass

Sergeant Murphy had promised our prospecting friends, when they resolved to poison their provisions, that Colonel Kinney would furnish them with an equal amount from the commissary department. This the Colonel peremptorily refused to do, but he offered to give them employment, if they would work for forty dollars per month in Government vouchers As these were unnegotiable, this was equivalent to asking them to work for their board, with no prospect of getting away in the near future The Colonel also refused to sell them provisions at any price It is but just to say in this connection, that Mr. O'Conner speaks in highly complimentary terms of the treatment himself and friends received at the hands of the post sutler and Sergeant Murphy Through the kindness of these two men, Mr O'Conner and a few others succeeded in getting together a few days rations Though every argument of dissuasion was used to prevent their leaving—the most urgent being that the Crows and Sioux had formed an alliance for a war of extermination against the whites—they struck out for Helena, themselves little expecting to get through without more hair breadth escapes Happily, their apprehensions were unfounded, they were molested but twice between Fort Smith and Bozeman, and these times theft, not blood, was the marauding villains' object

An Extraordinary Invention

The fertile brain of an ingenious Frenchman has just devised a method of locomotion which may perhaps be productive of the most important consequences It can hardly be called a new system of locomotion, but it certainly, if perfectly practicable, increases the value of an old system It is founded on a new principle applied to an old one well known—namely, that a layer of water introduced between two metal surfaces enables them to glide on each other with as little friction as a slab of ice on the polished surface of a frozen river. In this little railway wheels are entirely ignored, and skates introduced in their stead and it is possible that the invention, if applied to ordinary railway lines, would enable a locomotive engine to draw a train at double the speed it now does, with the same consumption of fuel and labor as are now required. The cars rest on slides, or more properly "skates," which fit upon rails constructed to receive them, by turning a cock a stream of water is introduced between the slide and the rail, and a gentle motive power being applied, the carriage thus mounted on a runner shoots forward with a speed which has really no limit beyond that necessary for the preservation of the train The rails employed by the inventor are broader and higher than the ordinary ones in use on railways Their upper surface is twenty centimetres—about seven inches—in breadth Four skates are fitted to each car, almost similar to those used by man for skating, except in shape and size A flange on each side keeps them on the rail, but plenty of freedom is allowed The part next the surface of the rail is hollow at the centre, and holes in the groove communicate with the tube which pass to a reservoir in the carriage containing water, which is subjected to a pressure of condensed air, equal to eight atmospheres The action of a bitcock affects the communication between the water and the skate. The water thus supplied passes thence in a volume to the skates and through the holes in the hollow to the rails The friction is almost imperceptible, and the traction or propelling power is greatly reduced Between the rails runs a longitudinal tube, receiving water at a very high pressure from a reservoir established at a high level This pipe or tube is fitted at every one hundred and fifty feet with a stopcock, which throws a strong body of water horizontally in the direction the train moves. A needle is fitted to the leading carriage which opens the cock, and the force of the water against the small paddles placed under each carriage, gives such an impetus that the train will ascend very steep gradients with ease, and at full speed This water is again, by the action of the paddles, passed into the reservoir of the motive carriage and neutralizes the friction between rail and runner or skate In descending gradients, the train descends by its own specific gravity, and the speed can be regulated to a shade by a supply of water to the skates, as the skates form in themselves a most powerful break from the friction of iron and iron Great care is required not to stop the train suddenly, as the concussion would be immense, and the passengers would have the effect of a collision almost as great as if another train struck the fronts of the engines on our lines, but did not run further The railway on which Mr. Girard exhibits his plan is fifty yards in length on one line, and sixty yards on the second line, and has an incline of five centimes per metre The trains ascend at a speed equal to those drawn by our powerful engines The motion is very easy, in fact, one would fancy he was in a sleigh on a frozen river The plan answers admirably on Mr Girard's model line, but there are many difficulties to be contended against One, for instance is the reservoirs They would cost a large sum, and it would probably be long before any railroad company, either in Europe or America, will be willing to put into practice on a large scale the ingenious invention of Mr Girard

WEDNESDAY MORNING, NOV. 28, 1866

The Shadow of a Coming Event.

Some days ago it will be remembered, the telegraph announced that several of the leading Democratic journals of the country had declared for the policy of granting the blacks the right of suffrage. The following is another dispatch on the same subject dated Chicago, Nov. 16th and published in the Sacramento Union of the 19th inst

> The Chicago Times persists in advocating negro suffrage and is creating a marked sensation. It says this morning that the popular verdict has declared for negro suffrage and it is wise statesmanship for Democrats to apply and control it, lest the radicals make the worst possible use of it.

The Chicago Times is by all odds the ablest and most influential Democratic paper in the West. Its utterances therefore have much significance. The Boston Post, the leading journal of the same party in New England, seconds the propositions of the Times and warmly urges their adoption. Many Democratic papers of the North-east also pronounce for the same policy. It may be,—indeed it is not unlikely—that this betokens a change of programme with that party. Disappointed in all the other expedients it has tried for regaining ascendency, it may come before the people in the next elections as the advocate of impartial suffrage, hoping thereby to gain a triumph for its candidates. It can, and doubtless will, point back with pride to the times when it did not regard color as a disqualification for an elector, and quote numerous precedents from its past history to show it is not hostile to negro suffrage. It will argue that in a government of the people and by the people, it is the height of absurdity and injustice to exclude a portion of the people from the enjoyment of political rights. Its managers would expect to lose the votes of a part of those who now swell its ranks, but they would expect this loss to be far more than balanced by accessions from the ranks of the opposite party. They would expect those Republicans who favor impartial suffrage to come over in crowds to the party which pledges itself to confer the elective franchise on all men, regardless of caste or color. This, doubtless, is the programme of these Democratic journals. What do Oregon Democrats think of it? Shall we soon see the Review, the Democrat, the Herald, the Reporter, the Statesman, and all the organs of the Democratic party in the State, following in the wake of the Chicago Times and Boston Post? The Times, it will be seen, thinks its party ought to bid at once for the negro vote and apply and control it. This work would well suit the editors of the Democratic papers of Oregon. They would at once forget their hostility to the negro and their aversion to going with him to the polls, could they be well assured that they could always rely on his vote. In that event we should soon cease to hear those profound arguments which have been so often employed to prove that this is a white man's government.

Not Convincing

Secretary Browning lately prepared an argument against the Constitutional Amendment, which has evoked much comment from the Eastern press. We have not seen the entire production, but small portions of it have appeared in the California papers. Here is a single proposition

> "No matter how the elective franchise be disposed of, whether exercised by few or many, all classes of the community are represented."

We know not whether this is to be taken as a sample of his entire argument. But we do know that this is a new exposition of the doctrine of republican or representative government. When the English Parliament was called in 1685 the elective franchise was limited to a very few persons whose right to vote was determined mainly by religious tests. Were all classes of the community represented in an assembly so chosen? When the Irish Parliament was convoked in 1689, the elective franchise was limited to such an extent that many members of the Commons were returned who had not received more than ten votes each. Were all classes of the community represented by those who had been elected by such a constituency? Suppose the elective franchise be limited to men who are fully six feet in height,—are all classes thereby represented? Mr Secretary Browning's argument, if the above gives a fair idea of the whole of it, is not convincing. The kind of government in which the elective franchise is exercised by a few and withheld from the many, is not what intelligent people generally would call a genuine republican government. They would call it an oligarchy.

Cruel Requital.—Strongly as the Democratic party is devoted to the cause of the South, not a few of the Southern people hold that party in utter contempt. The alliance of the South with the Northern Democrats in times past has not been very profitable, and the injured chivalry remember their old grievances. Thus the Norfolk Old Dominion recalls the unfulfilled prophecies of the Democrats in 1860, and their promises of assistance in case any attempt should be made at the North to resist secession, and says that the present Democratic talk of forcible resistance is the same old story over again. It remarks of the late political contest

> "In Pennsylvania we see Heister Clymer, a man who opposed the Government in every possible manner all through the war, running for Governor, with plumes stolen from the Philadelphia Convention decorating the dead carcass of the old Democratic party. It is a foregone conclusion, these men and their 'party' will be badly beaten at the polls in the coming elections, and the South left out in the cold as usual."

The conclusion of the Old Dominion from these premises is as follows

> "If this thing is to continue we shall urge the insertion of another section in the proposed Constitutional Amendment, putting it forever beyond the reach of any Northern Democrat, of the Vallandigham and Wood fraternity, to hold an office under any State, or the United States Government. It is enough to have our throats cut by our enemies, without undergoing torture from our professed friends."

Is not this a cruel requital for services so constant and so abject as those with which the South has been favored by the Democratic party?

Four days before Dr Robinson was murdered at Salt Lake City, the Telegraph newspaper, Brigham Young's organ, said "We do not suppose the heavens would fall if a miserable claim jumper or two should get checked up short." The significance of this remark will appear when it is stated that between Dr Robinson and Brigham Young there was a dispute about the title to some land, and that Brigham had declared that "whoever troubled his land should be sent to h—ll across lots."

Labor.—The Hon Hannibal Hamlin, in a speech at Philadelphia on the 3d of October, said with a force that will be felt "We honor labor because labor is the base of our system of Government. We honor the man that shovels the dirt, but despise the man that eats it."

A letter from Pioneer City, Idaho informs us that mining prospects are good in that locality for another year. Four ditches will supply the mines with an abundance of water, and a large yield of gold is anticipated.

Yosemite Outdone.—A waterfall has lately been discovered on the south fork of the Tuolumne river in California which is 2,000 feet in height. That is 700 feet higher than the Yosemite.

On the 13th inst there were 708 criminals in the California State Prison. A large showing, but not a good one.

Portland and the Pacific Railroad Routes

The Idaho Statesman has an article on Portland and the Northern Pacific Railroad, from which we make an extract

The building of the Northern road would cut Portland off from all trade between the coast and the interior territories. Some point on Puget Sound will be the western terminus of that road, where a rival to San Francisco will grow up, leaving Portland the rival of neither but the appendage of both. The Union Pacific road will be built in five years or less. The Salt Lake and Columbia road might be built in that time while if the Northern road shall ever be built it cannot be done in less than twenty years. But even if that road could be made as soon as the others Oregon has a more vital interest near home. The Northern road is designed to benefit about equally extreme Northern strips of American territory lying in Minnesota, Montana, Idaho and Washington and the British possession lying adjacent and there is a struggle now going on respecting the location of the road whether it shall be on American or British soil. Six hundred and fifty miles of rail will connect the Columbia river with the Union Pacific road at Salt Lake, and the route would lie all the way through the rich mineral and agricultural territory of Idaho and Eastern Oregon. Portland would by this route secure the shortest and cheapest communication with the East, and would indeed become the rival of San Francisco for the trade with interior and divide with her the business and travel overland. The produce and manufactures of the Willamette Valley would be easy of access to the mines of Idaho thereby increasing the value of the former and reduce the working expense of the latter. None of these benefits could Idaho or Oregon derive from the North Pacific road. With these facts before them, the people of Portland will be slow to believe the scheme of the Salt Lake and Columbia road prejudicial to their interests, or that it ever can be advantageous to them to assist in building the Northern Pacific road, or that the route by way of the British possessions, St Paul and Lake Superior is the most direct way from Portland to St. Louis and New York.

Of course it would be easier and less expensive to build a road from Portland through Idaho to Salt Lake City than to build the whole line of the Northern road. But we of this coast can build neither, and we must therefore ascertain which road other parties who are expected to furnish the means, would prefer to build. The Northern cities of the Eastern and great Central States prefer the Northern road. They are anxious that it should be built that they may have a share of the trade across the continent. New York, Cincinnati, St Louis and San Francisco are interested in the Central Pacific road, and in a few years this road will be pushed through. Those who are interested in the Union or Central Pacific route will have no disposition to aid the North Pacific coast in building a branch road from Salt Lake to Portland. Those in the Eastern and Central States who desire the construction of the Northern road would not be likely to assist in building the Salt Lake and Columbia river branch, because the latter road would pour its trade into St. Louis and New York, and be of no advantage to Chicago and Boston. So it happens that there is nobody East who cares anything about a road from Salt Lake to the Columbia river. Oregon and Idaho would be immensely benefitted by such a road, but they cannot get it unless parties elsewhere will furnish the capital to build it, and this they are little likely to do. It remains then to inquire whether we can get the Northern road. The prospects, it must be owned, look dark, but for the reasons we have stated we think they are better for this road than for the Salt Lake branch. The Northern tier of the great States may take hold of the Northern road and build it, but neither those States nor the States south of them have any interest in the branch from Salt Lake to the Columbia. We do not think that the last named road would be prejudicial to the interests of Portland, on the contrary it would be incalculably advantageous both to this place and to the whole State. But if it were built from Salt Lake City to this point, it would not be long till its terminus would be pushed forward to Puget Sound. This, in the opinion of the Statesman, would ruin Portland. If this judgment be correct, Portland cannot successfully contend against destiny, for a railroad across the continent is certain some day to have its western terminus on Puget Sound.

Late Eastern Dispatches

(The following late dispatches we clip from the Bulletin of the 17th. Though we pay for the dispatches here, we find that we do not always get them.)

New York, Nov. 14.—The Herald announces that the Emperor of Brazil will soon visit the United States.

Fernando Wood denies that he favors the Constitutional Amendment or negro suffrage.

New York, Nov. 13.—Under the decision in the Jumel Will case, it is understood that $88,000 is to be paid Nelson Chase, of which $10,000 goes to the Rev. J Howard Smith, $10,000 to the church at Carmansville, and various religious and charitable societies are to get some respectively assigned them in the will, and the balance is to be divided among the lawyers and heirs-at-law, who get $40,000, and the estate passes into the possession of Mr. Chase.

New York, Nov. 14.—It is understood that soon after the opening of Congress, the House Judiciary Committee will review the whole subject of the assassination plot, and examine witnesses relative to Jeff Davis.

The World this morning urges the President to issue a proclamation of universal amnesty and pardon, and adds if the President had at any time previous to the elections published such an amnesty, the Radicals would have pursued him with noisy hue-and-cry for leniency to rebels but the only time when such an outcry would do mischief is past, and the President ought at once to relieve himself from all embarrassments resulting from applications for individual pardons. The Radicals want to keep the remaining cases as the only means they have left of terrifying the South into the ratification of the pending or some more objectionable Constitutional amendments.

The inactivity of trade in woolen fabrics is a general source of complaint among New England manufacturers. Some of the manufacturers have already stopped. Well informed dealers predict that many others will soon do likewise. Serious falls in prices are expected.

New York, November 13.—The official vote of Delaware gives Saulsbury (Democrat) for Governor, 1,212 majority.

A Southern Judge on Negro Testimony.—Judge J. A. P. Campbell of Mississippi, on the occasion of a recent trial at which he presided, made the following remarks in relation to negro testimony. We are afraid that, though a Southern man, he will not be thought by some to be orthodox on this subject:

> "The idea that it is dangerous to admit the testimony of negroes against whites, and that combinations among them to fabricate false testimony will result in unjust convictions, will be dissipated in the mind of every sensible man who firmly reflects on the fact that it is usually difficult to convict of crime even on the testimony of whites, and that a jury of white men with all their knowledge of negro character with all the jealousy of caste and prejudice against this innovation in the law of evidence and a white judge with a Court House crowded by white spectators with white men as attorneys on both sides will not be likely to be deceived and duped into improper convictions. The danger is that too little value will be attached to negro testimony."

A Washington special to the Cincinnati Gazette tells this story

An intimate friend called upon Mr Seward to go in his company to be presented to Mr Lincoln. As they were entering the grounds of the White House this friend said "Mr Seward, it grieves me exceedingly to be going with you to see the President instead of going to see you as President." To this, Mr Seward stopped short and turning full upon him, replied with great bitterness in his tone "That, sir, was the doings of the Republican party, and for that I will have my revenge."

His efforts to obtain revenge have not been remarkably successful. He tried to divide the party but it closed up with a rebound that crushed him. He has met the fate of Milo.

Governor Morton Not a Presidential Candidate.—A dispatch dated at Indianapolis, October 25th says

The Journal of this morning feels justified in saying that Governor Morton will not be a candidate for Presidential honors in 1868 and does not wish to be placed in the category of aspirants

FROM WALLA WALLA

We clip from the Walla Walla Statesman of the 23d inst:

MONEY ORDER OFFICE

The money order system of the Post Office Department has been extended to Walla Walla and Postmaster Johnson has already forwarded his bond which being approved, the system will be immediately inaugurated.

THE TOUCHET MILLS

We learn that Watts's mill on the Touchet as also that of D. J. Locke & Co. are turning out large quantities of flour, for which they find a ready market at Lewiston at $9 per barrel. The flour manufactured at these mills has gained a high reputation in the mines and always commands a ready sale.

WALLULA STAGE LINE

Under the new arrangement the stages for Wallula leave Walla Walla on Sunday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday, at 5 A.M. The stages are due at Walla Walla at 6 P.M. the same day.

THE MULLAN ROAD

We understand that it is the intention of the delegation from this county in the Legislature to at once introduce a memorial into the Legislature asking an appropriation by Congress for the purpose of opening the Mullan Road. The Montana Legislature is now in session and one of the first acts will be the passage of a memorial to the same effect. The concurrent action of the Legislatures of the two Territories and the united influence of the Washington and Montana Delegates in Congress, cannot fail to secure the opening of this great national highway. The people of both Territories are alive to the importance of this measure, and co-operating together success cannot fail to crown their efforts. At a time when Montana was practically an unexplored country, the Government expended over two hundred thousand dollars in opening a channel of communication between the head waters of the Columbia and Missouri rivers. Now that the country is peopled by thousands of hardy and industrious farmers it will certainly be a very easy task to secure a trifling appropriation towards completing a work already commenced. We know from personal observation that the Eastern members are at all time ready and willing to legislate for the benefit of the settlements of the Pacific slope. All that they require is information and to be properly instructed as to the wants of the country. The memorial that will go from the Washington Legislature will embrace full statistics in relation to the trade and travel that is likely to pass over the road, and added to these statistics, the representations of the Delegates cannot fail to secure the desired appropriation.

Smoking in Austria.—The Austrians are great smokers, and during 1865 consumed 953,402,150 cigars of domestic, and 12,504,583 of foreign production. This large consumption of tobacco added to that smoked through the well known German pipe, shows where much of the weed goes to.

To Heads of Families.—Why do you allow your children to suffer, languish and die, when by a timely use of Newell's Pulmonary Syrup these apparently trivial symptoms that precede all serious affections of the lungs and chest, especially Croup and Whooping Cough, can be speedily and certainly relieved, thus saving yourselves much anxiety and many sleepless nights and your little ones a world of suffering. Take the advice of one who knows, and keep the "Syrup" always on hand.

ANDREW JOHNSON'S POLICY is creating a great excitement among politicians, but the people in general follow that policy which is most to their benefit, therefore buy all their Clothing, Boots, Shoes, etc. at the St Louis store No. 111 Front street, which KOHN & FISHEL sell at such extreme low prices, it being their policy to please the most fastidious.

FOAM OF THE SEA.—ELLSWORTH & CARDWELL, 89 First street (Postoffice Block) are astonishing the public gaze with the BEAUTIFUL PICTURES taken during the past rainy week. This is the only Establishment where all specimens of the PHOTOGRAPHIC ART are produced equally well in any kind of weather. CARTES DE VISITE, AMBROTYPES, MELAINOTYPES, Etc., furnished as usual to the patrons of this GALLERY.

ATTENTION DISCHARGED VOLUNTEERS!

Discharged Soldiers entitled to the EXTRA BOUNTY under the Act of Congress, approved July 28, 1866, who wish their application papers properly prepared will do well to call on the undersigned. For particulars see fourth page of this paper.

No. 5 Washington St., Portland, Oregon.

DIED:

Oct. 9, 1866, at the residence of Wm. S. Simmons, near Springfield, Lane county, Oregon, Mrs. Elizabeth Carter, in the 84th year of her age.

Deceased was born Feb. 18, 1783, on Wills creek, Somerset or Bedford county, Penn. While she was yet young her father moved to Kentucky while that was yet the "dark and bloody ground" of the savage, and in consequence several years of her youth were spent in the block house forts of the early Kentuckians. After marrying here she and her husband, Thomas Carter, moved to Spencer county, Indiana; were neighbors of Abraham Lincoln's father, and was present at the death and burial of his mother, who, with many other neighbors, died of the milk sickness then incident to that part of the country. They afterwards moved to Morgan county, Ills., thence to Van Buren county, Iowa, and in 1862 crossed the plains to Oregon with the family of her son-in-law Mr Simmons. She leaves many descendants and relatives widely dispersed through several States and Territories.

Money Market.

Legal Tender rates
New York Gold Quotations 138 [illegible]

[illegible] NEW.—It is stated that parties in Portland have been tendered a liberal offer from capitalists [illegible] to start a glass manufactory in this city. The [illegible] and terms of the offer are not stated, nor have [illegible] been entered into, so far as we can learn, [illegible] to make the offer available. There is no reason why such an enterprise should not succeed here. It certainly not fail for want of material [illegible], and the alkalies may be as readily had at Portland as at most other places where glass is manufactured. Nor could it fail for want of a market, for no one or two manufactories of ordinary capacity could supply the [illegible] consumption of glass ware in this State and the Territories. Glass being easily broken in transport, [illegible] is necessarily of high cost here. The consumer has to pay the dealer for what arrives unbroken a sum sufficient to amount to a profit on the entire shipment, and thus actually pays for nearly or quite thirty three per cent. more than he gets. If the glass were manufactured here, this per cent. loss caused by breakage before arrival at Portland, would be saved to the consumer. As [illegible] that the cost of manufacture would be no greater here than elsewhere, the maker could undersell the present prices and yet realize as much profit as Eastern makers, because he would sell to the consumers through only one or two hands and thus would not be obliged to sell at the per cent. off to which Eastern makers have to submit. The consumer also must save, because he would not have to pay for freight and breakage.

THE RIVER IMPROVEMENT INDEBTEDNESS.—The undertaking of the city to improve the navigation of the Willamette have cost a considerable sum of money, and the fund appropriated to that purpose has been for a long time insufficient to pay the warrants drawn against it. The council committee having charge of the work, have been considerably embarrassed from time to time to provide the means of prosecuting it, and the warrants have [illegible], entered a larger sum than would have been requisite, had the city been able to pay money down. Some time ago, to keep the work going the Council authorized a loan, but the well known deficiency in the river fund, the discounts to which warrants against it were subject, or the scarcity of money in the city, rendered it impossible to borrow money here and capitalists of California were averse to loaning so far from home. [illegible] holders of warrants which were constantly multiplying were [illegible]. To remove these embarrassments, the Council, at its meeting on Monday evening authorized the Committee on River Improvements to sell the city's bonds at a discount not exceeding five per cent. Yesterday, that Committee of which Mr McCraken is Chairman, disposed of bonds to the amount of $4,000 to Mrs M J Tracy, and about $1,000, or sufficient to cover the balance of outstanding [illegible], to Mr H. Seymour, all at the rate of 95 cents.

EAGLE CREEK MINES.—Messrs Shriver and Crandall [illegible] just down from Eagle Creek, represent the mining [illegible] of that district as good and growing better. [illegible] have come to feeling very secure in both the richness and permanence of the yield from the quartz lodges. The 'Golden Eagle' at Hog em is paying $3[illegible] to the ton. The La Grande company has had a mill in operation for ten days previous to the 17th inst., [illegible] rock from the "Gem of the Mountain." They had had no clean up, but they confidently expect not less than $40 per ton. The 'Badger' lode—a late discovery, prospects from 75 to 80 per cent. of copper with some silver. The Pioneer Copper and Silver Mining Co have sunk an incline in the Shriver lode—copper—to the depth of 75 feet. The rock from this mine prospects 75 per cent of copper. It has a stratum of rock which [illegible] $25 of gold, $0 of silver, and a large per cent of copper. There are several strata in this lode nearly all of which show more or less of native copper. The [illegible] which have been made during this last season of copper, silver and gold bearing ledges of quartz, have [illegible] a strong confidence in the district, and capital is beginning to offer freely enough to insure a thorough testing the next season. The Pioneer Company will erect smelting works on the Shriver lode in the spring.

SORRY TO SEE IT THUS.—The cisterns a long time since [illegible] upon Main street, Oregon City, are to be filled up, partly on account of having become dangerous [illegible] to pass over and partly because of there being no fire department now in that city. The Enterprise gives the following brief history of the Fire Department which once existed there. M'Laughlin Engine Company No. 1 was organized in the year 1855. The Department then had for Chief Engineer James O'Neil Assistant [illegible] John M. Goodwin. On the 10th of January, 1861, the Department was re-organized, and E. Milwain [illegible] Chief Engineer. Capt. Wm. Dierdorff was at the same time elected Foreman of M'Laughlin Company No 1, Lew. Day 1st Assistant, and Arthur Warner [illegible] ant, W C Johnson Secretary, and Thomas Charman Treasurer. During the time of these organizations the engine probably more than paid for itself by [illegible] the fire on two separate occasions, to the building in which it originated. The engine is a relic of its day, and is yet in the city, but it is of such old fashioned [illegible], and requires such a large number of men [illegible] it, that very probably it will never see service again.

FOR ST. HELENS.—There is lying upon Couch & Flanders wharf, three large boilers and machinery for a saw [illegible] mill, sash and door factory, etc., to be [illegible] to St. Helens for Messrs Richie & Abbott. These gentlemen, as we are informed, intend to build immediately a large saw mill, and as soon thereafter as possible, such a large planer and a factory for the manufacture of sash, doors, blinds and all styles of work usually made in similar establishments. Two of the boilers now on the wharf are each about 30 feet in length, the third is about half as long, but of about five feet diameter. This latter is of peculiar construction, the furnace being within the boiler itself. One end, in which the fire is placed, has an opening of more than three feet, the blaze of the fire passes through to the other end, where the opening is much smaller, then passes back between the outside of the boiler and the oven like walls in which the boiler is fixed to the chimney at the end whence it started. The boiler, instead of being furnished with the ordinary flues, is simply divided by plates into several compartments. [illegible] stand the machinery for the mill and factory is all of very perfect workmanship, from Eastern foundries.

OBJECTS OF PRAYER.—The professing Christians who have charge of the noon-day prayer meetings, have designated the following objects of prayer for each day of this week: Monday, prayer was offered for all professors of religion, Tuesday, for all who are interested in the subject of religion, Wednesday, the children and youth of this city and the schools and teachers, Thursday for persons who feel no interest in religion, Friday, for the city of Portland, that its numerous haunts of vice and [illegible] may be removed, Saturday, for the churches [illegible] who preach the Gospel may be more earnest [illegible] in their work.

[illegible]'s COURT—HOFFMAN JUDGE.—The Court yesterday morning, 27th, was called upon to settle according to [illegible] made and provided, a row between two [illegible]. Larry Smith and Wm Cluff had a [illegible] of opinion which finally grew into earnest [illegible] and from that to a decided "unpleasantness," both parties making use of physical arguments to overcome the impossibility under which each labored, of [illegible] ("as the other saw him—to cut it short, they [illegible]." The Recorder charged them $5 each for the use of the corporate limits as a ring. They paid the rent and took a walk.

PORTABLE SAW MILL.—The Oregon Iron Works, this morning, ship to Independence, Polk county, the boiler and machinery for a portable saw mill ordered through [illegible] & Co. These mills are put up complete, with the [illegible] of the saws at the Oregon Works. The engine is mounted on the boiler, so that the whole may be loaded on a wagon and moved wherever it may be desired. The power of the one shipped to-day is 15 horse-power, and weighs from 7 500 to 8,000 pounds. The finish appears to be equal to the best.

THE F[illegible].—This steamer left Victoria on Sunday, the 18th, for this port, but has not yet arrived. Up to [illegible] morning the 22d, nothing was known of her at Victoria. Mr. Worth who left Victoria, Thursday, and arrived here yesterday, informs us that the Fidelity took away about fifty persons including the officers and crew. If she did not put into Neah Bay, her fate may be doubtful. Once on the outside, if not lost, she must have been blown away to the North by the high winds of last week.

GET YOUR MONEY.—At last, the city treasury has money to pay off the warrants drawn against the River Improvement fund. Holders of warrants will take notice and govern themselves accordingly. The interest on such warrants will cease from this date. The Council's River Improvement Committee are entitled to credit for having [illegible] against and successfully overcome a good many obstacles in the way of the solvency of this fund, and they will receive the thanks at least, of the warrant holders.

[illegible].—It is reported that several of the young [illegible] of this city are making arrangements for a [illegible] ball at the Turners' Hall, to take place on or about the 20th of December. This will be something new for this latitude and will no doubt create a sensation as well as an infinite deal of fun.

What, a play toward? I'll be an auditor,
An actor too, perhaps, if I see cause

PERSONAL.—W C. Johnson attorney for the Government to take testimony in the case of the Hudson Bay Co. and Puget Sound Agricultural Co against the United States, accompanied by Messrs Tolmie, Huggins and [illegible], who represent the interests of those companies arrived yesterday, from Puget Sound. They will be engaged here for a few days in taking testimony.

THE FAIR.—The Catholic Fair, yesterday and last evening was an improvement upon any former day, both as to numbers in attendance and receipts. From the best data attainable, it is thought that the receipts for Saturday and Monday will reach near $1 000. The receipts for Tuesday must have been proportionately greater.

THANKSGIVING SERVICES.—In addition to the places already [illegible] where Thanksgiving services will be held, there will be services at the Catholic Church at 10 o'clock A. M., conducted by Rev Father Fierens. At St Stephen's Chapel, services will begin at 11 o'clock A. M., Rt. Rev Bishop Scott officiating.

FROM OREGON CITY.—The Senator, yesterday, landed from Oregon City, 152 sacks feed, 40 sacks middlings, 23 sacks oats, 160 quarter sacks flour 402 boxes apples, 3 bales hay, 90 sacks bran 1 coop chickens, 1 bundle trees, 1 trunk, lot of merchandise and lot of household stuff.

BROKEN.—The submarine cable connecting San Juan Island with Swinomish parted three or four days since and, consequently, there is no connection with Victoria. The last dispatch from there, came on Thursday the 22d.

BURIAL.—The remains of Joseph Kopltre were yesterday, interred in the Odd Fellows' cemetery West of the city, with the usual ceremonies of that order, of which he was a member.

FREIGHT UP THE WILLAMETTE.—The P. T. Co's steamers to Salem Albany Corvallis [illegible] go with full loads at every trip. The Fannie Troup the other day left Canemah with over [illegible] to be delivered between that place and Corvallis.

COMPLIMENT.—[illegible] receipt from Mr C. F. Green of the Cosmopolitan [illegible]. Mr G has just [illegible] in Carter's new building.

The shortest and best route to [illegible] is to get [illegible] Brown [illegible] towards the [illegible].

MONTANA.—The Legislature of this Territory convened on the 5th in that Virginia City. The following is an extract from Gov. Smith's Message:

A memorial should also be addressed to Congress in behalf of the Northern Pacific Railroad. There is nothing which will so enhance the value of Montana property as the completion of this road through the Territory. It is well understood that it will begin at the head of Lake Superior, and running a westerly direction, strike the Missouri river either at the mouth of Musselshell or Yellowstone, thence with the stream it shall follow to the bend, thence through the Rocky Mountains at some practicable point touching the headwaters of the Columbia and down this to the point of navigation on the west side of the mountains. Every one is interested in this great enterprise. We have now the telegraph which brings us in hourly communication with the great marts of the world, and supplies us every morning with news from our old homes, the States, and all civilization. With the completion of the railroad, we will be brought by travel within five or six days of any eastern city. The immediate and quick commerce will be opened up to us, and what we cannot produce on our own soil, can be had at our doors with little cost, while the products of the Territory which will be sought by all men everywhere, will be carried out cheap, and yet have a par value in all the markets of the world. The Government feels kindly, I am sure, towards this national enterprise, and when it has seen the immense treasure which has been taken from our mountains and gulches, and that we send gold by the boat load to the East, that the silver and copper mines are enormous and almost fabulous in their richness, that our soil is rich—growing the finest wheat and barley, potatoes, cabbage, and other vegetables, with the richest and most nutritious grasses in the world, they will not hesitate to bring itself to immediate communication with us.

THE SOUTH AND THE CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT.—The New York Times, of October 20th in speaking of the efforts that are being made by Wade Hampton and others to carry the Southern people against the amendment, says:

We shall regret it most profoundly, if these efforts should prove successful. Nothing in our judgment could be more disastrous to the whole country, and especially to the Southern States, than such a result. They are sacrificing their substantial interests to a false idea of their own dignity and honor. They are repeating the very mistake which dragged them into the rebellion and overwhelmed them with ruin. Wade Hampton, is the very last man whose advice they can afford to follow, for he is a type of the very class whose advice betrayed them to their ruin. The Southern people were made to believe, by him and others like him, that their honor was at stake, that they were insulted by the National Government, and that self respect forbade their submission. They had no injury to complain of, they could point to no tangible and positive wrong they had suffered, but their honor would not permit them to submit longer to the control of the National Government. And under this false and fatal advice they plunged into rebellion, with the results they have now so much reason to deplore.

They are in danger of repeating this blunder, with the same disastrous results. They are very likely again to sacrifice their substantial interests to a false idea of "chivalry." Wade Hampton, in his speech, longs for the counsel and advice of the Rhetts and the Yanceys and the old leaders of the South, and deplores their loss. Nothing could be more fatal to the South than the return of such men, and such sentiments as theirs, to ascendency. One would think the Southern people had suffered enough at their hands, and that they would now be ready to consult their own interests, their substantial welfare, rather than the passions and resentments which these men always invoked.

Andy at Sea.

[Dedicated to the Union League, by Rev. E. E. Adams.]

"Andy" is out on the open sea,
In his dear little boat "My Policy."
The waves are sunny and the sky is blue;
Says "Andy," "I'll paddle my own canoe,"
And over the main goes the shrill refrain,
"I'll show you what I can do;
I'll put 'My Policy' through!"

Away he glides on the willing tide,
With a Seaward look on either side;
"Haul up the canvass and let her go;
I am a tailor and I can sew;
If the sail flies in twain, I'll mend it again;
Hurrah for something that's new:
I'll put 'My Policy' through!"

Away he rides, this "merry Andrew"—
On the heaving flood, with his staggering crew;
And they noisily sing in their dizzy ring,
"Who cares for Congress? let it swing!
We've Bread-and-Butter, our foes may mutter,
We'll paddle our own canoe,
We'll put 'My Policy' through!"

They feel the rush of a sudden gale;
They hear, o'er the waters, a troublous wail;
The voice of brave Vermont has spoken;
A note from Maine's great heart has broken;
The "old" Keystone repeats the note—
"Ay! paddle your own canoe,
Yes! put 'My Policy' through."

From Indiana's broad domains,
Ohio's hills and Iowa's plains,
The tones of Destiny go past!
They rend the canvass, bend the mast!
"O, Seward and Doolittle, what can we do?
Sure Raymond and Beecher, you
Can put 'My Policy' through."

But Raymond leaps o'er the dipping wale,
Yield to the billows, is born by the gale,
Creeps to the shore with panting breath,
Thank Heaven, he has escaped the death;
Then waves adieu to the laboring crew,
Who know not what they can do,
To put 'My Policy' through.

The Peril of the Mines.

AN OLD LADY'S STORY.

No one knows why the tiny woman who lived near the great coal mine was called Aunt Mudge, although every one knew the instant she came in view why she was called little, for very small she was, not much larger than a child.

This Little Aunt Mudge had a heart so large that it could not live in her, but came out through kind words from her lips and loving tides in her eyes, until it fell all about her, enveloping her little person so completely that she was all heart, and when you looked at her you could not see anything else; and you thought she was as large as any one until another person chanced to come and place, five or six feet of human growth beside her mite of being, and then you could not help exclaiming, "What a little woman!"

When you were on your way to visit Aunt Mudge, and saw the brownest little nut-shell of a house in the world, standing close to the mouth of the great coal mine, you thought: "Oh, that is a nut which ripened years ago on one of the giant trees that grew to make the coal beds, and it has been getting browner and browner every century since the trees forgot how to grow, and I know it must be very hard to crack." And so you would go up to it, and put out your hand in all its strength, and give a knock on the place where the shell looked the thinnest; and just when you were expecting to hear a great cracking noise, the door of the shell would open so gently that, before you were aware, the kernel would be before you; and you would be drawn into the nut by a friendly hand; and when the door was closed the nut would seem to be singing about all the suns that had shone upon and the winds that had blown over the great tree on which it grew.

Once upon a time somebody whispered that Little Aunt Mudge had made a great discovery which she was keeping profoundly secret—that she had certainly found the fountain of perpetual youth, for there grew not a wrinkle more on her loving face this year than the last, and the winters also passed and "left no sign."

The miners who went below always stopped to say good bye, and for their coming up Aunt Mudge watched with a strange wistful look that never seemed to tire. It was this that kept her young—the miners—coming up from the mine. Her wistful look could not be diverted at the magical hour and no inducement could tempt her to stay from home even for one day.

During the months of one spring, an owner of the great mine removed with his family to a small house midway between the village and the house of Little Aunt Mudge. His name was Owen Vail. He had two sons, Paul and Arthur, boys just emerging from childhood into that restless transition state that furnishes so much material for ship owners.

Day after day the two boys wandered about the mountains, lingering long at the entrance to the mine and scarcely restrained from going down, notwithstanding prohibition and warning.

There were strange gases and mysterious gusts of dampness far down, hundreds of feet below the surface—signs which made the miners give the lips at home farewells with strong impulses clinging to them; born of the fear that they might be forever—signs which caused Little Aunt Mudge to watch the blackened features as they came up, with something very much like tears in her eyes.

One morning—it was hours after the last man had disappeared within the shaft for the day—Aunt Mudge, opening the door of her brown little hut, saw Paul and Arthur manipulating in a suspicious manner, the apparatus at the mine.

While she watched, Paul sprang into the bucket, and, before the little woman could reach the spot, he had commenced the fearful descent, Arthur acting as his conductor.

"Hold, hold fast!" cried Aunt Mudge, ere her hand went out to arrest the unwinding of the rope: but Arthur, who had been watching long for just that opportunity, when there should be no man to oppose at the mouth of the mine, had no thought of being stopped by a woman, and he unwound faster and faster, until a firm grasp was fixed upon his hand and the speed arrested.

"Gently, gently!" gasped the woman, "if you will save your brother's life."

At the words Arthur turned white with fear and let go, leaving all that fearful strain upon the small hands that could just but hold in their grasp the crank of the windlass, and the rope was so old that it must give way soon and might at any second—it had been used for months.

Aunt Mudge seized the crank with both hands, and cried, "Help! help! quick!"

Arthur caught it just in time; it was slipping from her grasp, and the two gently lessened the motion until the bucket stood still.

Paul had jumped in very bravely, anticipating a fine time and a terrible surprise to the miners below when he should suddenly drop into their midst; but even as the blue sky was shut from his sight, he gasped with an emotion very like fear. When the rays of light disappeared, one by one, he began to tremble and cling fast to the sides of the tub, that was only large enough to hold him. It was perfect blackness in the shaft, and the air that rushed up as he felt himself to be rushing down, was not like the brave, sweet air that he had breathed under the blue of the sky; it made him think of suffocation, and the darkness was so dense that he thought it was burying him alive; he felt its weight driving down upon his head.

In that moment Paul Vail would have given everything he possessed to be safely out of the coal region.

Suddenly he felt himself to be no longer going downward; the motion had changed to a swift circling course, that would have made his brain dizzy but for the fearful darkness. The rope was untwisted, but he knew it not—one strand had parted.

He shouted aloud, and from the depths his own voice thundered back to him. The thought was whispered to him, "May be Arthur cannot hold the crank any longer," and the fearful sequence came: "What, if he lets go?"

Paul Vail had never before been in a position of utter helplessness. He had always had his own strong arms and feet to aid his movements—his eyes to tell him where he might move; and now he found all these gifts of no manner of service—there was nothing for him to do but to pray. God shuts every soul in thus at some point in life, with himself, that the soul may feel after God, if, happily, he may be found.

It is not always in mines or on the ocean amid billows and nature's wrath, or in the earthquake's tremor, that the soul of man meets this point of utter dependence on its Creator. It comes in still small ways—the friend in whom we trusted fails us; or all our plans are crossed in counterplans; or we watch the feeble, fluttering breath and know that it is going out, unless the Giver of Life breath anew upon our loved one.

Paul Vail's time for prayer came, and the cry went forth for help.

"Now, my boy, hold fast, wind gently, and, God willing, we will have him safely up," said Aunt Mudge; but her voice trembled and only her hands nerved themselves to the task. It was quite a different affair, Arthur found her drawing up the bucket. Their united strength could but just compass it, and then the awful danger of the rope's parting, and the necessity for uniform tension. Once or twice the little woman's eyes wandered down the mountain but no help came.

Steadily, steadily around the windlass wound the rope, until there came into view the parted strand—it was giving way fast.

"Have mercy!" ejaculated Little Aunt Mudge, and bidding Arthur to "hold fast," she sprang down, close to the open shaft, and with arms stretched over the edge, she caught the rope below the parted strand. Her hold was just sufficient to balance the break.

No mortal can tell how long the boy's muscles could have done service in holding the crank, or how long the brave little arms could have done duty over the shaft: and there's no need to tell: for God sent a strong hand, that reached down beside the weak arms, and another and another came, and Paul Vail was drawn upward, and once more he saw the blue of the sky, that had seemed so precious to him when shut out from it.

Arthur and Paul had, in their careless zeal to explore the mine, availed themselves of an old worn out apparatus, that no miner would have thought of risking his life by, and the miners from the other side of the mountain had arrived in time to save Paul. There had been heard strange noises in the earth that day—a great groaning of gasses, that gave warning of danger to be, and the men were going down to clear the depths in time.

Little Aunt Mudge watched the descent, and then invited Paul and Arthur into her little hut.

She did not scold them, nor tell them what bad, naughty boys they had been, but she told them a story; and this is the story that she told:

Twenty years ago last May I came to live in this bit of a house by the great coal mine, to be near by husband and my two boys; not that I felt they were in any great danger when I lost sight of them going down into the shaft in the morning; but then you see I could have them by me a bit longer in the morning, and then it was so pleasant to watch for them coming up at night, and more than all, little crumbs of news came up from time to time all day. Somebody would be coming up every little while, and I had many a chance to drop in the buckets little tin pails, with a taste of something warm, right off the fire, or a bottle of hot coffee, when I saw my husband or Rufus or Charles was a little weak; and then to watch for the "thank you, wife," or "thank you, mother," that was always certain to come back the next chance. Oh, I like living here. I would not have gone away to live in the finest house in the land, and left my husband and boys behind. We had a bit of a garden at the door. I see you laugh as you look at the ground now; but they have covered up the spot, and I am glad. I could not bear to look at it after that time I am going to tell you of.

It was seventeen years ago last May when the overseer of the mine came one night to talk to my husband. He took him out of the house and beyond the little garden paling, where I could not hear what he said; but when he had gone, John—that was my husband—looked soberer than I'd ever seen him in my life, and he was always the brightest man, full of good thoughts to all, and the thankfulest man to our Father that I ever saw. He could not help laughing out his gladness. He said "there was so much of it coming up in his soul that he couldn't help letting it out," and it made me feel as if I was all done up in a rainbow somehow; and then the two boys—

For a moment Aunt Mudge stopped, and Paul ventured to ask:

"What did the overseer want?"

He wanted my husband to go down into the mine at midnight, and examine it, just as the miners had gone below now. There were noises, strange growlings and groanings, and the damps were filling all the mine. You see they opened the mine then on both sides the mountain, east and west, and the miners were working toward each other, hoping to gain an opening through the mountain, and some people thought it was the air rushing through that made the noises. Well, my husband went down. He never told me till 'twas just midnight. You see it was Sunday night, and nothing could coax him to go down on Sunday; so he let me go to sleep, and when I woke up the moon was floating into the room like a great high tide, and there, right on the river of it, was John, kneeling on the floor and saying his prayers; and I heard the little clock in the kitchen shelf strike, and I counted twelve. Just then came a knock, and John said "Amen" quite out loud, and got up. Then he came and looked at me and saw that I was wide awake, and so he kissed me and said:

"Good bye, my little Mudge. I am going down the mine to look at some things they've found down there. I'll be back, please God, to eat breakfast with you."

The moonlight and the prayer and the knock, and the good bye, all seemed so strange that they dazzled me, and I let him go; but a dream I had just after, frightened my sleep away; and I went out and sat by the lonely shaft and watched all night. I listened with my ears close to the opening; but it was all so still, and the great full moon walked down the blue field, and the dark mountain came up between, and the day began to break at last and then I got up. My two boys were out, early as it was, digging in the garden to surprise me, so I stole in at the front door, and let them think I was asleep.

The little round table—you see it there—was soon ready; four plates and knives and forks on it—it was just large enough for four. Well, while the breakfast was waiting for John, the boys came to inquire for their father, and when I had told them where he had gone they never stopped to speak, but went straight out, and I followed them to the place where I had watched all night. Just then the miners were come and they said Rufus and Charles must not go down; but my two boys could not be kept back, and they bade me good bye, and, as their bright heads went out of sight, Rufus called back "keep the breakfast warm, mother, and we will fetch father up to eat it soon."

The place where the coal was taken out of the mine was about half a mile away, and the men who stood at the windlass were gone to it, and I could not bear to leave the place, the signal might come at any instant, and there would be no one there to mind it so I stayed, but no sign came until the sun was high in the sky; and then, boys, I heard a soft step behind me, as I sat watching the rope, not daring to take my eyes from it to see who came nearer and nearer.

"What is my little Mudge doing here?" said John's voice. "I've come for my breakfast," and my husband stood leaning over me. "The boys, John," was all that I could utter, never stopping to ask or wonder how he could have come to me.

"God pity us, wife, if the boys are down below," was all he said, and in an instant he was gone for aid. He met the two men returning from the coal shaft, just beyond the garden railing, and dazed as I was by everything that day, I knew enough to run to the house for a bit of food, that might never meet the lips it was prepared for, and to lend a hand at the crank, as my John and another brave soul were down out of sight. The signal came to draw back before many seconds, and the two men could not lift themselves out of the bucket when they came into the air, but held on, with white, gasping faces, although we wound up as fast as we could; and when I saw them, I knew my two boys would never come back to me as they had gone from me. But I had my husband safe, and I tried to take that into my soul, and to make it grow there, and cover up the great wound that I had got.

"You didn't tell how your husband got out," gasped Paul, thinking of his own just escaped danger.

No, I forgot that, thinking of the boys. There were terrible eruptions and explosions down there in the deep blackness, and the lamps seemed of no use at all, the air was so thick; and God alone knows how, but the ways between the east and west shafts were opened by some angel, and the poor fellow escaped death by it. At that dreadful time the mine was so filled up that the old places are not cleared away yet, and that is what I am waiting for. It will come soon now. John never got well. He went away from me day by day, until, at last I could find him no longer; but in some way he left his cheerfulness and his thankfulness behind for me to live by. The last words he said were—"I'm going to the west shaft to watch for the boys; you stay and watch here." That night he died, and I saw the full moon walk down the great blue field up above, and the shadow of the mountain came up, and it was all darkness; but the sun was shining full on my face and on John's; but it was not the sunshine that made his shine, it was something that he saw in heaven, and they put him away with the light still on it.

That night the miners brought up from the depth below something that they touched tenderly and carried with uncovered heads into the little brown house.

The little brown hut of a house has gone from the mountain; the little woman who had found the fountain of perpetual youth is gone from the earth to where life springs are immortal, and she sees the something that John saw in Heaven: and to us, who watched and are left, there are dark mines, and miners ever coming up and going down—waiting for us to give them a helping hand, and to pour into the shafts of life of the sunshine that God gives richly to those who dwell on His mountain.

The Earl of Leicester, husband of Amy Robsart, and favorite of Queen Elizabeth, astonished the England of his time by spending £60,000 on the castle and grounds of Kenilworth. This sum is equivalent to £300,000 at the present time, or $1,500,000—the amount which an American dry goods merchant, A. T. Stewart, is now spending for his marble house on Fifth avenue, New York.

SALE OF UNITED STATES MONITORS.—A dispatch dated Havana, October 20th, says

It is said that this Government has purchased of the United States two monitors at an expense of $2,000,000, and as the Government has no available funds, two wealthy merchants of this city have gone security for the amount.

The British Government has agreed to guarantee a loan of $22,000,000 to establish the British North American Confederation, which is to include Hudson's Bay Territory.

Recently a girl in the employ of a paper mill company in Milwaukie, while picking rags, found over $1,000 in greenbacks in an old knapsack which had been purchased along with some other rags. She communicated her good fortune to two of her companions and shared the money with them. They kept the matter a secret, left the employ of the company, bought good clothes and cut a swell generally. This caused suspicion and led to an investigation which developed the facts as above stated. About $800 was recovered and taken possession of by the company.

A coxcomb, talking of the transmigration of souls, said: "In the time of Moses, I have no doubt I was the golden calf." "Very likely," replied a lady, "time has robbed you of nothing but the gilding!"

To Soldiers Claiming Bounties

UNDER THE

EQUALIZATION BOUNTY BILL!

THE UNDERSIGNED, HAVING RECENTLY RETURNED from Washington City, where he has made the proper arrangements for the collections of the Extra Bounty of $100 allowed to all soldiers enlisted after the 19th day of April, 1861, for a period of not less than three years, and $50 for soldiers enlisted for a period of not less than two years.

Persons entitled to the benefits of said Bounty will find it to their interest to attend to its collection at once. Having an Agent at Washington, and personal knowledge of the mode of making collections through the Departments, I can get returns promptly.

☞ Call with your Discharges, and two witnesses for identification, at the Publication Office of the Daily Oregonian, No. 5 Washington St., Portland.
A. BUSHWILER, Claim Agent.

RULES AND REGULATIONS FOR THE PAYMENT OF BOUNTIES, UNDER THE ACT TO EQUALIZE BOUNTIES, APPROVED JULY 28, 1866.

WAR DEPARTMENT, ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE, }
WASHINGTON, September 16, 1866. }

1. All applications shall be filed within the period of six months, from the 1st day of October, 1866, and before any payments are made, shall be classified by regiments, battalions, or other separate organizations, and no application filed after that period shall be settled until after the former shall have been paid.

2. No application shall be entertained unless accompanied by the original discharge of the soldier and the affidavit required by the fourteenth section of the Act, and the further affidavit that he has not received, nor is he entitled to receive from the United States, under any laws or regulations prior to the Act of July 28, 1866, more than $100 bounty for any and all military service rendered by him during the late rebellion, over and above the amount therein claimed.

3. All applications for the additional bounty authorized by this Act from surviving soldiers shall be in the form hereinafter prescribed, and the evidence of identity shall be the same as is now required, and applications from the heirs of deceased soldiers shall be in the form now required by the Treasury Department.

4. As soon as the examination of the claims of any regiment, or other independent organization, shall have been properly acted upon the Paymaster General shall take the necessary steps for their prompt payment.

5. A register shall be kept in the Paymaster General's office, and also in the office of the Second Auditor, of all claims presented under the law, in which the claimants will be classified by regiments, etc. If the claims be allowed, the amount of bounty paid to each will be noted, and if rejected the cause of rejection will be distinctly stated.

6. In the applications for bounty, as required by the third of these rules, the affidavit shall state each and every period of service rendered by the claimant, and also that he never served otherwise than as herein stated.

7. Organizations irregularly in the service of the United States, or called out for special purposes, as State Militia, Home Guards, etc., and not included in the general bounty laws, are not included within the meaning of the Act.

8. Soldiers enlisted for "three years or during the war," who were discharged by reason of the termination of the war, shall be considered as having served out the period of their enlistment, and are entitled to bounty under this Act.

9. The minority of heirs, claimants for bounty under this Act, must be proven to have existed at the date of its passage. Parents shall receive jointly the bounty to which they may be entitled as heirs, unless the father has abandoned the support of his family, in which case it shall be paid to the mother. Non-residence in the United States shall not be a bar to the claim of heirs, who would otherwise legally inherit.

The provisions of the Act exclude from its benefits the following classes:

1. Those who, after serving the full period of their enlistment, were dishonorably discharged at its expiration.

2. Those discharged during enlistment by way of favor or punishment.

3. Those discharged on account of disability contracted in the service, but not occasioned by wounds received "in the line of duty," who shall not have previously served two or three years respectively at the time of discharge.

4. Those discharged on account of disability existing at the time of their enlistment.

5. The heirs of those who have died since their discharge of wounds or disease not contracted in the service and in the line of duty.

6. The surviving soldiers and heirs of deceased soldiers who, under previous laws, have received or are entitled to receive a bounty of more than $100 from the United States.

7. The surviving soldiers, as well as the heirs of deceased soldiers, when such soldiers have bartered, sold, assigned, loaned, transferred, exchanged or given away their final discharge papers, or any interest in the bounty provided by this or any other Act of Congress.

8. The Act of the 28th of July, 1866, creates no right of inheritance beyond those vested by the law under which these heirs received or were entitled to receive the original bounty, and debars certain classes, brothers and sisters of heirs that were entitled to receive the original bounty, from any claim for the additional bounty provided by this Act.

Respectfully referred to the Attorney General for his opinion on the point whether the rules and regulations as within amended are in conformity with law.
EDWIN M. STANTON,

Old Settlers!

BEWARE OF THE RAG-TAKERS, when property is not safe on Block Thirty-seven, between Fifth and Sixth streets, with a good fence six feet high around it. The house that I built in 1851 stands on that Block. The Rag-Takers went in and carried away such things as suited their convenience on Saturday the 17th November, 1866. After their search of the house and barn there were missing eight pulu pillows, one iron teakettle, one tin teakettle, one skillet, two large dripping pans, blankets, clothing and rags. On Monday, the 19th, I got out a search warrant to search Winehart's Old Brewery. In the search found two pulu pillows on their beds, iron teakettle on their stove, skillet and one dripping pan with their stove furniture. These things and the Rag-Takers were taken to the Recorder's Court by Ward. The evidence taken was what a Splinter of the Law said—calling the house an old shanty, and the things taken nothing but rags, and other language as low as the things his client's took.

SOMETHING NEW!

THE NEW LIGHT!

DANFORD'S

Atmospheric Coal Oil Gas Lamp!

ARTIFICIAL LIGHT OF SOME SORT, IS A UNIversal necessity. A Safe, Cheap and Brilliant one is a Luxury—a luxury only enjoyed heretofore by those who live in large cities where Gas is used. Years of study and much capital have been exhausted in experiments to produce a lamp wherein the ordinary Kerosene or Coal Oil could be used without a chimney, and without unpleasant odor while in use. That fruitful source of expense, trouble and annoyance, the chimney, is in DANFORD'S COAL OIL GAS LAMP avoided; it is the most perfect lamp and will entirely supersede all other Coal Oil Lamps; it is the cheapest artificial light that can be used, yielding the light of an ordinary six foot gas burner for less than ½ cent per hour, is double the quantity of light of an ordinary Chimney Lamp, for one third the cost. It will burn when turned down to a taper-light, ten hours for a cent, is free from smoke, can be carried from room to room and the wind will not blow it out. These LAMPS will be on exhibit and for sale at the Music and Art Gallery of Shanahan & Dufrene, corner of Morrison and First streets.

Medical.

TO THE UNFORTUNATE,

NEW REMEDIES, NEW REMEDIES

Dr. Gibbon's Dispensary,

616 KEARNEY STREET, NEAR COMMERCIAL, San Francisco. Established in 1854, for the treatment of Sexual and Seminal Diseases, such as Gonorrhea, Gleet, Stricture, Syphilis in all its forms, Seminal Weakness, Impotency, etc. Skin Diseases of years standing, and Ulcerated Legs successfully treated.

Horrible Diseases.

How many thousands of persons, both male and female, are there who are suffering out a miserable existence from the effects of secret indulgences, which are absorbed into the system! Look at their pale, emaciated and disfigured faces and their broken-down constitutions, disqualifying them for the happiness of marriage or the enjoyment of life. In this horrid situation, thousands suffer until death closes the scene. Let parents, guardians, friends, attend to those who are victims of any of these horrible life-destroying maladies, that they are cared for and cured before it be too late. Send them immediately to Doctor Gibbon, a physician who has made private disease his especial study for years, and who is certain to cure the most inveterate cases without mercury or any injurious drugs. It is important to those who are afflicted, or to those who are interested in the welfare of their friends, to be careful of the many pretended doctors who infest all cities, pretending to succeed in curing all diseases in a few days, imposing upon the public by using the names of eminent physicians in Europe and other places. Be therefore cautious, make strict inquiry, or you may fall into the hands of these charlatans.

Seminal Weakness.

Seminal Emissions, the consequence of self-abuse or solitary vice, or depraved sexual indulgence, is practised by the youth of both sexes to an almost unlimited extent, producing, with unerring certainty, the following train of morbid symptoms, unless combatted by scientific medical measures, viz: Sallow countenance, dark spots under the eyes, pain in the head, ringing in the ears, noise like the rustling of leaves and rattling of chariots, uneasiness about the loins, weakness of the limbs, confusion of ideas, blunted intellect, loss of confidence, diffidence in approaching strangers, a dislike to form new acquaintances, a disposition to shun society, loss of memory, hectic flushes; pimples and various eruptions about the face, furred tongue, fetid breath, coughs, consumption, night sweats, monomania and frequent insanity. If relief be not obtained, should apply immediately, either in person or by letter, and have a cure effected by his new and scientific mode of treating this disease, which never fails of effecting a quick and radical cure. Dr. G. will forfeit Five Hundred Dollars to any person who will prove satisfactorily to him that he was cured of this disease by any of the San Francisco quacks.

DOCTOR GIBBON is responsible, and gives his patient a written instrument, binding himself to a radical and permanent cure, or make no charge.

Persons at a distance may be CURED AT HOME, by addressing a letter to Doctor Gibbon, stating their symptoms, length of time the disease has continued, and have medicines promptly forwarded, free from damage and curiosity, to any part of the country, with full and plain directions for use, for Ten Dollars, sent in a registered letter or through Wells, Fargo & Co.

Address DR. J. F. GIBBON, 616 Kearney street, corner Commercial, San Francisco. Post Office Box 1957. Consultations FREE.
